appropriate for a regional RTO to also be a transmission owner. The thinking was that a RTO should be able to relieve transmission constraints, and that is why we could have competition for transmission assets. The FERC has created a wholesale transmission access category where transmission owners with less than 250 MWs in a year could bid, but they are restricted to only providing transmission service to competing loads. All of these "transmission only" issues will be resolved in FERC's Order Number 97-A adopted last week. FERC will then extend the order to include all transmission owners. Christi -----

The relationship between laser-induced fluorescence (LIF) and atomic- and molecular-dissociation laser sources is a subject of continuing interest, because of the many applications of LIF in spectral line detection and precise atomic and molecular spectroscopy. Furthermore, the fluorescence produced by the 590.5-nm transition of the 2p4 (3)P1-2s4 (3)S1 atomic-dissociation line of neon is useful for gas absorption detection. Absorption of neon by different gases leads to a change in the laser-induced fluorescence spectrum. This article presents a recent survey of the properties of LIF-based detectors and their application to the detection of gas molecules.Q: How many elements of the form $1+1+\dots+1$ are there in the sum $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} n^3$?

 This is a question from a questionnaire in a math competition. The question is:
 How many elements of the form $1+1+\dots+1$ are there in the sum $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} n^3$? Here is the answer given in the book: A: How many elements of the form $1+1+\dots+1$ are there in the sum $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} n^3$? There is an obvious counting mistake in your answer: the correct answer is that there are $n!$ different ways to arrange the n 1 's in the sum $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} n^3$
