The resulting gameplay exhibits the likeness of the movements of actual players, who will be able to distinguish themselves through their extraordinary facial and body animations, tackling techniques, and passing and shooting techniques, as well as four-time FIFA Ballon d'Or winner Ronaldo. In addition to this, FIFA 22 also introduces "True Player Motion Physics," the technology that allows players to move, behave and react like the real-life players. New levels of authenticity are ensured by using multiple virtual cameras - created in collaboration with Sixense - to record in real-time movement data and capture key moments of a player's run, receive, shoot and pass. This is accomplished through the implementation of 11 dynamic cameras and physics-based behaviors during gameplay. FIFA 22 introduces "Flowmotion

Technology,” which allows players to control the ball without pressing buttons and switches, through natural gestures. This new control system allows players to perform more natural dribbling, as well as make a run-up, receive, pass, shoot or header using a natural and effortless control scheme. The “Flowmotion Technology” makes on-ball actions easier for players by allowing them to perform one-handed movements. FIFA 22 introduces the Player Impact Engine that ensures authentic and realistic ball physics. The engine allows players to use both upper and lower limbs to strike the ball, as well as receive, shoot and pass. FIFA 22 introduces an “Optimized Shot Engine,” that allows players to create more realistic shots by increasing the deceleration of the ball on the way to the target, the height of the ball, as well as the trajectory and the spin of the shot. FIFA 22 introduces the “Player AI,” which allows players to be taught by the game's computer-controlled teammates, resulting in new and expanded artificial intelligence. FIFA 22 introduces the "High Precision Dribbling" mechanic, which allows players to make more precise head gestures, unique foot flicks, and unique spin variations on the ball. FIFA 22 introduces the "Sprint Engine," which allows players to perform more natural sprinting and acceleration and to run with the ball better than ever. It also enables players to sprint with just one foot, for accurate and balanced sprints. FIFA 22 introduces the "Control Overlay"

I like the game play mostly, but they took out some good touches. For example, passing in the middle of the field, after the ball is played and the defense is coming to stop you, the players will just shoot a little ahead of you, and you'll just slide to the ball and kick it in, and the defender has to get out of the way. The animation of the players is really smooth, the game play is very good, but I don't like the touch screen controls, I would want the sticks, just as the Xbox One. The biggest surprise for me are the graphics, or lack of. The game looks like the 360 version of FIFA. I expected a difference in graphics due to being a next gen game, but I still got the same graphics. Buy it, especially if you played the 360 version, I would buy it at full price just for the DLC alone. The game play is pretty smooth and it looks to be fun especially to the kids. All the people seem to be saying that the game looks to look more like the 360 version
