McGiffin

Imagine, like, a damned game world. You could move freely through this game world, run, fight, and make friends with other players along the way. Occasionally, you might encounter hostile creatures, who you could attack. You could level up and collect experience points for crafting something like better armor, but you could also turn these game world experience points into currency that you could use to buy items in a virtual store.

So you could play free-to-play games with your friends (or enemies) in a real game world, for a low or even free cost. That's the promise of IGC: 'Immersive Game Connection.'

Massie

The latest version of the free2play world (I'm testing version 2.75b at present) provides ways for players to compete for PvP rewards as well as accessing a wonderfully social online store.

The biggest change in IGC is the ability for players to earn 'Skilling Points' by competing in PvP matches. The more skill points a player has in IGC, the more skill points he/she can earn by playing PvP matches.

This difference is expanded by how minigames can be introduced into a post-release patch. The idea is that players can be rewarded for playing these minigames by getting a special promotion for their IGC, similar to the kind of alternate currency that free2play games typically use.

Transcriptomic profiling of peri-implant associated microbial colonization in the mouse peri-implant sulcular niche. The roles of the dental implant microenvironment in shaping peri-implant microbial colonization remains the fundamental enigma. Using an engraftment device that permits the sampling of the dental microenvironment, we describe herein the intra-oral evolution of the peri-implant microflora in FVB mice. The impact of biomaterial on the bacterial colonization was investigated through intra-oral implantation of titanium dental implants and steel implants. After implantation, host animals were allowed to recover for 6, 24, 72, or 120 days prior to the termination of the experiment. Samples were obtained for intra-oral bacterial culturing and RNA extraction for transcriptomic analysis. The transcriptome results were validated by a Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) strategy.
