Investors on the hunt for bonds viewed by some as safe haven amid the continuing turmoil in the credit markets can find themselves having to dig deeper than anticipated. These blue-chip securities, which are generally considered to be those rated investment-grade by

Standard & Poor's, were among the best-selling debt issues last week, according to data from the bond market tracking site Trace, but they fell short of rivals in the municipal market for the second straight week. Investors pulled out money from cash for the first time in two months, according to the Investment Company Institute, as they increasingly preferred to avoid riskier areas of the market. "All kinds of assets are still in play because interest rates have nowhere to go," said Bill Gross, founder of the Pacific Investment Management Co., which oversees $250 billion in fixed-income investments. "I just don't know how long this is going to go on." The bond market can be a wild one, with
