Interventional radiology (IR) procedures are becoming increasingly common, but the use of ionizing radiation presents some challenges to radiation safety in the ED. Ionizing radiation is a known teratogen, and therefore, all patients should be carefully screened before exposure. High-dose procedures are associated with a greater risk of radiation-related complications than low-dose procedures, such as fluoroscopy. Proper documentation, including the date and time of the procedure, radiation dose, and patient name, will help provide information about exposure. Radiation workers must wear appropriate personal protective equipment. To reduce the risks of radiation exposure, the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 mandates that workers must first wear a lead-lined apron, over-shoe covers, and a thyroid collar while administering radiation. After the procedure, these workers should change into scrubs and remove the thyroid collar.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a keyboard device. 2.
