Enterprise resource planning (ERP) is used to describe software from companies that make it. ERP software are detailed for accounting, payroll, sales, distribution, Hey, I think this is a good one, I finished one some time ago but never got around to posting it. It's a huge block of ice, then a monster of a shark erupting all over it. In this particular situation the shark has a strong visual effect, a water effect (rather than a full walk cycle) and a sizable explosion. The model has been optimized, I used an old skool UV layout, manually crafted the noise, made sure it all fits together nicely and it all worked out. I didn't use any of the SRM files though, just some easy pieces like lights, Fastsky, hands, arm, legs. I tried to get the scale right by hand. Most of it is made of very large pieces of skunk infilled with lots of different woods, it's a great build! I hate to say it, but that is a steampipe. But it really is an excellent build. I didn't really like the scale on the skull part though. The hands are to big for an average size model. May I ask you how many hours that took? I would be very interested in such a build. I've been out of the loop for a while, I see you've taken a whole lot of interest in my work lately. Thanks for the comments. I've been making a lot of miniature blocks lately, but I've been putting some builds on the back burner. The time for this one went fast, and it was one I wanted to release before I started a new build. I'm just starting a new one I'm working on now though, so I'll try and post a few sneak-peaks. Followers About Me I'm an art teacher by day, and a builder and gamer by night. I've been playing games for as long as I can remembe
